

DX re-awarded accreditation on Government Procurement Service courier framework (RM1006)

DX, a leading independent logistics and parcel distribution company operating throughout the UK & Ireland, today announced that it has been awarded a place on the Courier Framework Agreement (RM1006) by Government Procurement Service. This gives DX accreditation from Government to be a trusted supplier for a number of its courier services including next day delivery, delivery of specifically agreed dangerous and hazardous goods, and the provision of secure delivery services to the Government and wider public sector.

DX is also an accredited postal services framework supplier (RM782) for Government Procurement Service and has existing long-standing relationships with IPS, Land Registry, Ministry of Justice and the Crown Prosecution Service, amongst other governmental departments. This is the second time that DX has been awarded accreditation on the Government Procurement Service courier framework.

Paul Doble, sales and marketing director at DX, comments:

“The Government deals with highly sensitive material on a daily basis and, as such, needs a supplier it can trust to transport such material from location to location. At DX, we’re delighted to have been re-awarded this accreditation from Government Procurement Service, which we believe strongly highlights our on-going commitment to secure services for our Customers and demonstrates how our innovative solutions, such as GDX (Government Delivery Network), helps the Government to achieve its objectives by improving efficiency. We continually strive to improve our performance and securing this Framework Agreement is testament to the hard work and great service delivered by our team.”

DX’s GDX Government Delivery Network provides secure and reliable next working day delivery of mail and parcels between government and business locations. Its secure delivery services are trusted by financial institutions, UK and overseas government agencies, ticket companies and the UK’s leading retailers.
