

Network Airline Services and Aigle Azur Offer New Destinations to Berlin and Domodedovo

Network Airline Services (NAS) and French airline Aigle Azur have announced the launch of two new destinations—Berlin Tegel (TXL) and Domodedovo (DME)—from 1st December, 2017.

The airline will operate four flights per week between TXL and Orly (ORY), the Aigle Azur Hub, and two direct flights from ORY to DME (Friday and Sunday). Cargo from Germany will be trucked to TXL to feed into the Aigle Azur network.

Florent Turlier, Group Business Development Manager for NAG, says, “NAS is the GSA for Aigle Azur in most of Europe. With Aigle Azur operating about 300 regular weekly flights to 20 destinations, we are thrilled to be further increasing the options we can offer to our customers.”

Sander van Vilsteren, Senior Commercial Manager, EMEA, who oversees the Aigle Azur product within the NAG Group, adds, “This will now allow us to strengthen Aigle Azur’s position in the German market in offering direct services.”
