

Update for post: Management merry-go-round begins ...

2 August 2012

The Loadstar spoke with Chris Notter, former head of cargo handling for Etihad Airways, who has been surprised by the amount of industry interest generated by his move to Qatar Airways.

He told us: "My departure from Etihad was amicable and I left on very good terms. I really enjoyed my time there and I'm very proud of what was achieved. I was lucky to have been part of a very successful cargo team and I will miss them very much.

"The reason for moving on is for new challenges, and I will always look back fondly on my time in Abu Dhabi, which has provided me with many good personal and professional memories."

Mr Notter is expected to start at Qatar Airways later this month.
