PALL-EX WELCOMES TRIO OF NEW UK MEMBERS

Pall-Ex, the UK and European palletised freight network, has announced the arrival of three new members; Kench Transport, Richard Read Transport and Exact Logistics.

Kench Transport will enhance its service offering through membership of the network as it looks to optimise resources and minimise environmental impacts through Pall-Ex's efficient hub-and-spoke model. The logistics specialist will provide network services throughout the SO postcode areas.

The Fareham-based company is already well established, operating a large variety of environmentally efficient vehicles, providing same-day, next-day and express collection and delivery services of pallets and parcels. Membership of the Pall-Ex network will see the business take its first step into the palletised freight distribution sector.

Simon Kench, depot principal at Kench Transport comments: "Pall-Ex really stood out in terms of its commitment, communication and ambition. The dedication of our Pall-Ex network manager is already making a difference as we establish new, productive relationships."

Gloucestershire-based Richard Read Transport also joins the network following a recent restructuring of Pall-Ex's operations throughout the South West.

Commenting on the announcement, depot principal Richard Read adds: "Pall-Ex is considered to be the leading force in the UK freight industry, with a strong ethos on quality service provision and efficiency. These principles align greatly with our own, as we look to develop our offering to customers and ultimately grow our business."

Finally, Rugby's Exact Logistics has commenced management of a number of areas throughout the CV postcode area, where its Pall-Ex membership will enhance the logistics specialist's service promise of excellent communication, delivery and customer service.

Adam Shuter, managing director of Exact Logistics, comments: "Our membership with Pall-Ex means freight can be delivered even more efficiently than before. We are now able to offer an additional range of services to our clients and increase our customer base. Since joining the network, we have been able to handle increased volumes of freight on behalf of existing clients, gaining more than 20 new customers in the UK and Germany."

These new developments follow the announcement that Pall-Ex Benelux will commence operations throughout Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg by early 2016. Having offered complete European coverage for a decade, Pall-Ex's growing pan-European network offers the unique advantage of local and international expertise and partnership to its members and service-users.

Pall-Ex director of network services, Sue Hodgson, concludes: "We are very pleased to welcome Kench Transport, Richard Read Transport and Exact Logistics to the network. Each of the businesses is already making a great contribution to the network, providing the highest standards of quality service locally, nationally, and across Europe."
