WFS WINS ITS FIRST-EVER CARGO CONTRACT WITH JAPAN AIRLINES

Worldwide Flight Services (WFS), the world's largest cargo handler, has won its first-ever contract with Japan Airlines.

WFS, which provides ground handling services to more than 300 airlines across its global network, has been awarded a cargo handling contract by the airline at New York's JFK International Airport to manage Japan Airlines' twice-daily Boeing 777 and 787 services to Tokyo. WFS expect to handle over 15 million kilos of cargo a year for the airline.

Sydney Stephenson, Vice President Ground Handling and Cargo, U.S. East Region and Canada at WFS, said: "This is a milestone contract for WFS to be working with another of the world's most respected airlines. This contract follows our move into cargo building 75 at JFK International Airport, which helped to demonstrate to Japan Airlines our commitment to consistent improvement and service quality. We hope this will be the first of many more contracts between the airline and WFS in the future."
