With the majority of its exportation performed to European and American countries, South Africa exports a great variety of products right across the world. The products exported by South Africa generally consist of machinery, electrical - electronic equipment, chemicals and automotive parts, and such products are mainly exported by air cargo and currently carried by passenger flights operated by Turkish Airlines.

Situated at the eastern coast of the African continent, Madagascar comes to the forefront as a market which exports a wide range of goods. Mainly vanilla, tropical fruits and textile products are transported to European and American countries while live crabs and sea products are transported to the Far East from Madagascar.

The cargo flights, to be initiated to both destinations by Turkish Cargo, will allow diversification in terms of variety of products transported.

Turkish Cargo, providing its customers with the best connections to key production and trade centers in the world, strives to develop attractive opportunities with high-end quality services in order to meet customer needs in the region and bring the world even closer.

Increasing the frequency of its cargo flights to Dakar on weekly basis from one to two upon launch of flights to Kano, Turkish Cargo will increase its operations across the region.

As the second destination after Lagos in Nigeria to which Turkish Cargo will operate cargo flights, Kano stands out with its processed leather products exported to especially European countries. Appealing other important markets such as India and Sudan, all products, which have been manufactured in Kano but transported via Lagos before, will now be able to be transported right from the location of manufacture.
