

Airbus and Boeing do like a spat. And often, they take it up a level - as in this instance. Now the EU is to question what it claims are $8.7bn in tax breaks for Boeing from Washington State. The move follows a similar complaint by the US that European governments helped fund the A350 programme. Both whinges follow a 2012 WTO ruling on both manufacturers, which said that each had received unfair subsidies. The question now is whether the aircraft-makers have complied with the WTO rulings - or ignored them completely. Answers on a postcard, please.

KERRY LOGISTICS LIGHTENS THE LOAD FOR BRITISH DESIGN BRAND TOM DIXON

London, UK, Monday 19th May 2014 - Lighting, furniture and accessories design brand Tom Dixon has teamed up with Kerry Logistics to help support its global expansion.

Tom Dixon is using Kerry Logistics to provide global integrated logistics services for its growing portfolio of design products, now sold across 65 countries.

Paul Dawson, Operations Director, Tom Dixon, said: "In our search for a single supply chain partner of the right size and with a presence in our key supply and fulfilment regions world-wide, Kerry Logistics stood out against its competition."

Kerry Logistics will deliver international freight forwarding and distribution, as well as logistics solutions from fulfilment centres in Hong Kong, London, New York and consolidation centres in India, China and London.

Gary Wilcock, Managing Director Europe of Kerry Logistics, said his team was excited about working with such an inspirational British brand and helping to support its expansion.

"We are currently working with over 40 of the top 100 brands ranked by Interbrand, and our European team is proud to be supporting a number of UK designers as they reach out to new markets," he said.

Established in 2002, Tom Dixon is on a mission to design the future with innovative lighting, furniture, and accessories inspired by Britain's unique heritage.

Tom's works have been acquired by the world's most famous museums and are now in permanent collections across the globe including the Victoria & Albert Museum in London, MoMA in New York and Centre Beaubourg in Paris.
