

TT Club insures London Gateway

London, 14 November 2013 – The TT Club, the leading international transport and logistics insurance provider, has announced it will be providing liability cover for London Gateway, the UK's largest deep-sea container port.

The TT Club insures the DP World global network of ports and the addition of the newly-built UK container terminal is a welcome addition to its portfolio. The TT Club 45 has a year history of providing liability and asset insurance for ports and terminals worldwide, both for container handling and other types of cargo. The Club is, therefore, well-placed to underwrite the risk presented by a ground-breaking new facility such as London Gateway, which is designed with an operational capacity of 3.5 million TEU.

Commenting on the inaugural opening of London Gateway, Charles Fenton, CEO of the TT Club, said: "We have worked with DP World throughout its network of global terminals and are grateful to them for the opportunity to continue our partnership. London Gateway promises to be a very significant addition to the UK's transport infrastructure located where it is, at the heart of the country's largest consumer market. We are proud to be associated with yet another milestone in the ever-expanding container handling sector."

The port is Europe's largest logistics park with 2,700 metres of quayside, offering the latest technology and infrastructure for shipping lines, including the 'ultra large container ships' (ULCS) which can carry up to 18,000 containers. Located in Stanford-le-Hope in Essex in the South East of England, the newly opened hub will reduce exporters' and importers' transport and supply-chain costs and provide global businesses with an efficient shipping gateway.
